It was a trip I'll never forget. My family decided to have a picnic somewhere far away from the city. ~~I was never a fan of spending time outside, but I could never refuse a good picnic with my family.~~ We packed everything we needed and drove away from the city. Soon, we found a perfect spot for our picnic - a vast open field near a lake.

At first, everything was fine. We ate sandwiches and drank tea with cookies. While I was stuffing myself with another sandwich, my little sister, who was about 8 years old, asked me to play "hide and seek", to which I replied, "Okay, Sure, Why not?" "I didn't understand how we were supposed to hide in an open field, but my sister was an excellent hider, so it was quite challenging for me to find her every time.

We played for about an hour. I looked for her, then she looked for me. At some point, however, ~~my~~ I couldn't find my sister anywhere. I looked under stones, ~~in~~ the grass and even in the bags, but she was nowhere to be found. I called her, but I knew she wouldn't reply, because my sister is always very quiet in "hide and seek". It was bewildering and almost bizarre to think that she could hide so well. I was starting to worry because it was getting quite late, so I decided to look for my sister in the nearby forest. ~~When~~ I thought that my sister was ignorant enough to hide in the nearby forest. I was very worried at this point.

When I returned to our picnic spot, I discovered that my sister was there. I was confused, but my sister explained: "You took so long to find me, so I got bored and stopped hiding". Apparently, she was hiding in the car the entire time! But it didn't matter for me, because I was happy to see her.
