It was a trip I'll never forget. Long ago, my husband Jeremy and I had a challenging time in our relationship. Everything seemed dull and strange, and we were confused. He became ignorant and didn't spend time with our daughter Poppy, a seven years old charming girl. I worked a lot, and couldn't focus on the family neither. We decided to spend some time in the country, a family weekend. But who could ^{have} known that it would end in such way.

It all started when we saw the bewildering views of the hills with the bizarre amount of greens. Fascinating scenery brought us a forgotten feeling of a relief. We stopped by the road to have a rest on the grass. Poppy sat on Jeremy's lap, and he tried to braid her hair. The whole situation was hilarious, and three of us were laughing. The atmosphere of joy and love surrounded us. "Dad, you ~~are~~ bring me fun ^{when you are} around", - said Poppy.

On the way back, I came to a realization. What ^{had been} ~~was~~ missing was our time together. We absolutely forgot how ^{lovely} it was to enjoy each other's company. "Jeremy, I am sorry", - I said.
